COMMENCEMENT, 1940

IN THIS ISSUE

"Sixty-third Annual Commencement" announces plans for Alumni Day on Monday, June 10, and details of the other events of Commencement Week.

In "The President's Page," Father Rector writes of "the psychological basis of an Alumni Association" and urges the Alumni of Boston College to stand "shoulder to shoulder."

"Business College on Heights" announces the transfer of the classes of the College of Business Administration to University Heights with the opening of school in September.

The publication of a biographical novel by Rev. John L. Bonn, S.J., of the College faculty entitled "So Falls the Elm Tree" is announced in "Catholic Book of the Month."

In the "Law School's Tenth Anniversary" will be found the details of the celebration in honor of this school's jubilee.

Joseph W. McKenney, '40, the College correspondent for the Boston Post, reviews and previews the sports picture on the Heights in "With the Athletes."

The list of contributors to the first Alumni Loyalty Fund (May 1, 1939, to May 1, 1940) appears on page 18.

VERY REVEREND WILLIAM J. MURPHY, S.J.

The campus is green and fresh and the tardy bareness of a late spring has given way before the swift rush of nature to catch up with the sun. Another Commencement Day is at hand — a day which, unique in American collegiate tradition, marks not only the Vales of the graduates but as well the Aves of the alumni. A thousand or more alumni, distributed according to the five-year plan will be here to renew old friendships and to give play to the feelings which bind them to Alma Mater.

It may be well to stress at this time the need we have of standing shoulder to shoulder not only on the second Wednesday of June but throughout the year. A college that understands its function correctly looks on all its students, past and present, as members of one family. While the word, family, is analogous, yet it is not merely a metaphor; for the College does endeavor to act as a parent. Sympathetically it enters into the soul of the student; with firm insistence it endeavors to actuate the finest capacities of each one; with patient foresight it leads him into the way of the good life. This shaping power, exercised so carefully at a time when the material is responsive, continues its influence throughout life — and indeed into eternity. Because this cultural and moral and religious development has been effected so largely through the inculcation of noble and inspiring ideals, the impress of the college takes deep root in the emotional life of its students. The graduate speaks of his college years as the happiest of his life and that in spite of blue books, bells, the tedium of dictionaries and of themes thrice revised, of card catalogues and reading lists. The labor limae is forgotten and only the "dear paternal image" remains.

This experience is something that is shared only with fellow graduates, with members of the same collegiate family and is the psychological basis of an Alumni Association. It is the basis of the conspiratio in unum that is the form of the society of graduates. Its direct and principal object is of course the college itself and its activities. But its orbit is really much wider; reaching out to include all fellow members what bear the common image. As the years multiply there are many circumstances that tend to weaken the bond between members of the same college group,-distance, the paramount interest of one's own family, divergent paths of endeavor, competition perhaps in the same circle,-yet in the heart of every B. C. man there should be room enough for every other B. C. man. This May message then is a plea for co more active mutual support among our gradu-If the circumstances permitted it I could recount incidents that would make hearts beat a little faster, "A brother's help to a brother is like a strong walled city." To lend a hance when the upgrade is too steep for the tired climber, to speak a cheering word when ears are throbbing with jeers, to take it for grantec that another is in the right until you are certain that he isn't - and then to condone the error to stand shoulder to shoulder when the come petition is bitter, is it too much to ask that such should be the code between Boston College men?

SUNDAY, JUNE 9

BACCALAUREATE

SERMON

The sixty-third Annual Commencement will take place from June 9 to June 12 inclusive.

Commencement Week will be opened with the Baccalaureate Sermon which will be given by Rt. Rev. Richard J. Quinlan, S.T.L., LL.D., on Sunday evening, June 9, at 7.30 in the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Msgr. Quinlan, a member of the Class of 1915, is Diocesan Director of Schools.

Father Rector will be the celebrant of Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament which will follow the sermon.

Alumni Day will be observed on Monday, June 10. The program for the day will be started with the traditional parade of the classes to Alumni Field. The baseball game with Holy Cross will start at 3 o'clock. Inasmuch as the election of officers is being conducted by mail this year the meeting which was formerly held in the Science Building for this purpose will not be necessary. The reports of the present officers will be made in the Library, at which time the results of the election

Dinner will be served in the Tower Building at 6.15. John C. Holbrow, '24, is Chairman of the Committee in charge of the dinner. An excellent menu has been arranged and the caterer has assured us that the service will be of the highest

will be announced.

At 8 o'clock the alumni will meet in the Auditorium of the Library Building to be greeted by Father Rector and the President of the Alumni Association. The speakers will be few and select. The program will be completed with the fifth annual presentation of the "Ham-and-Eggers" who have entertained the returning grads so well in recent years. With Bill Marnell, '27, Jerry Coughlin, '23, Tom Herlihy, '26, Bill Ohrenberger, '27, Ed Sullivan, '14, etc., taking care of the program an enjoyable evening is assured. The title and theme is an inviolable secret, but we learn from a source that is usually reliable that this year's performance may outdo even the best of the past.

MONDAY, JUNE 10

CLASS DAY

The Senior Class will conduct the traditional Class Day exercises on Tuesday, June 11, to be followed by the customary Senior spread and soiree.

The program will be brought to a close with the Commencement Exercises Wednesday, June 12, at 3 o'clock. Francis X. Ahearn will deliver the salutatory and Edmund J. Kenny will give the valedictory. The alumni are cordially invited to attend the Commencement exercises.

Universal Boston College

COMMUNION SUNDAY

More than five thousand Boston College alumni participated in the observance of Universal Boston College Communion Sunday on March 31, under the direction of the officers of forty local Boston College clubs. From Boston to San Francisco alumni assembled in their own communities to receive Holy Communion in a body, and following Mass, for Breakfast. The central breakfast, which was held at the College under the auspices of the Newton, Brookline and Brighton Clubs, attracted more than three hundred alumni to hear addresses by Very Rev. William J. Murphy, S.J., President of Boston College, and Charles A. Birmingham, LL.D., of New York, a member of the Class of 1910. The addresses of Father Murphy and Mr. Birmingham were broadcast over the stations of the Yankee Network and were received at the other meetings. Francis J. Roland, President of the Alumni Association, presided at the breakfast and introduced the speakers.

Father Murphy in his talk on "Religion in Democratic Education" pointed out that "We cannot hope for an enlightened people without a clear and definite knowledge of religion. No set of facts, no body of knowledge can stand by itself. . . . Knowledge without religion is truncated, fragmentary, shorn of most of its meaning. . . . Is it not abundantly clear that the great reform most needed today is to discard the pernicious philasaphy of education we have been following, to break down the barriers that have been erected between life and religion, to move out into the sunlight lest the growing generation be stunted and scrubby. . . . It seems to me that the alumni of a religious college such as ours can undertake no more fruitful task than that of laboring under the direction of their spiritual leaders, the parish priests, and their bishops, for the complete restoration of religious education. We who know how deeply religious influences penetrate into the individual soul, who have experienced the strength, the nobility, the meaning religious education gives to life, who realize how it shapes in the mould of sacrifice and charity our social relations, owe it to God and to our country in this crisis to share the fullness of our experience with our fellow men.

Mr. Birmingham in his address cited the work of the Cure of Ars and of St. Vincent de Paul as examples of ". . . the realism of the saints, their mighty challenge to cruelty and ignorance and the pride of life. No bitterness of controversy, no display of intellectual brilliance, but a profound challenge to evil in all its forms. Their strength was the strength of christianity—the value and the dignity of the human soul. . . . Because of this we have come today — near and far — the sons of Alma Mater, joyfully and gratefully, back to our Mother's House,

PARADE OF THE CLASSES

The second annual reunion of the "super-annuated grads" was held at the Hotel Kenmore on Wednesday evening, May 15th. Jeremiah W. Mahoney, Vice-President of the Alumni Association was in charge of arrangements for the reunion.

The guest speakers were Very Rev. William J. Murphy, S.J., President of the College, and Alumni President

Francis J. Roland.

Among those in attendance were:: Daniel J. Prendergast, '02; Arthur L. Curry, '02; Judge Timothy J. Ahern, '98; Thomas M. Green, '98; Thomas E. Kelley, '03; John C. Riley, '03; Louis A. charles A. Birmingham, LL.D., of New York, conferred distinction and honor upon the class by delivering a masterly oration at the recent Communion Breakfast of the Alumni Association at University Heights.

The Class of 1910 will hold its 34th Annual Dinner at the City Club on Wednesday, May 29, 1940.

It is interesting in this connection to note that true to a pledge made at bound one to another by this bond of spiritual kinship. For though the years be many or few, though the learning of our student days comes ready at the call or only when deeply stirred, there strikes down into all our hearts the memory of this never failing emphasis—'the Kingdom of God is within us.' Beyond and above the man-made learning of the centuries there appeared the glorious luminary, high and supernatural, teaching the individual soul that it is the creature of a creator who has redeemed it at an infinite price and that in Him there is eternal life. These are the thoughts that fill our minds today, Sons of Boston College, as we come back to this beloved roof, or meet in far cities, to kneel in adoration and to partake of the Bread of Life."

Mr. Birmingham pointed out as the three principal sources of the evils that beset the world, greed, nationalism and atheism. He concluded—"Walking in humility, and not deluging ourselves with the merits of others or with what we may think to be our own, we shall find clarity of sight to keep us in the way. Through all the dissonance of life, we strain to hear the words of the sacred liturgy, 'Tu solus Sanctus, tu solus Dominus, tu solus Altissimus.' In this faith, my Fellow Graduates, did we go out from these doors. In this faith we return today."

Numerous communications came in from alumni in all parts of the world commending the plan of the Universal Communion Breakfast and telling of their silent participation in the program of the day that expressed the unity of Boston College men wherever they may be.

BUSINESS COLLEGE ON HEIGHTS

When Alma Mater announced in the Spring of 1938 that her College of Business Administration would open its first classes the following September, her many friends and alumni received the news with enthusiasm. It was thought by them that this decision marked the fulfillment of a long felt need. Hardly less enthusiastic was the response given to a recent announcement of Very Reverend Father Rector that, with the September term of 1940, all classes in the College of Business Administration would be held at University Heights. For every Boston College man knows that the real home of the Boston College undergraduate must ever be the beautiful campus and gothic halls which crown the heights above the reservoir.

The first Freshman Class of the College of Business Administration was assembled at the Boston College Intown Centre on Newbury Street. Spacious classrooms, a compact library, convenient location provided sufficiently adequate quarters during the first two years of its existence. But it was most obvious that this could not be a permanent abode for the latest progeny of Alma Mater. Her frequently announced and emphatically stressed purpose to provide not only a well-balanced programme of cultural and technical studies, but also to complete these courses with the vitally necessary training in Christian morality and Religion demanded a more effectively equipped laboratory than could be had at the Intown Centre. In prospect there loomed another gothic structure on the Heights, which would be devoted exclusively to the expanding needs of the student of Business Administration. But, while hopefully awaiting the realization of this plan, many are the advantages which can be gained now by transferring the rapidly growing school to the College campus. Better accommodations will be had for the Accounting laboratories and other technical activities. cilities of our splendid general library, supplemented by those of a special departmental library, will provide adequate opportunity for research in the elective fields of Accounting, Marketing and Management. The College Chapel will be the everliving source of that inspiration which a Jesuit-trained student has found indispensable in life. In a word, coming home to the Campus will mean for the student body of the Business School a participation in the college life of fourteen hundred students of the various departments of the College of Arts and Sciences; that collegiate life with all its varied activities, religious, intellectual, literary, social, recreational and athletic. Nor will the separate identity of the College of Business Administration be impaired. Specially prepared quarters in the Tower Building will accommodate the offices of the Administration and the departmental library, while the respective classes will be kept distinct throughout the curriculum.

No wonder then that the announcement of Very Reverend Father Rector was received with enthusiasm. Beyond our most hopeful expectations has been the early development of the College of Business Administration. Its enrollment has been most gratifying; its student body, in both curricular and extracurricular activities, has created that favorable impression which has its source in serious endeavor; its ever-increasing number of friends has given splendid encouragement to the efforts of Boston College in this her new field of academic activity. There is every reason to believe that there will be even greater progress when the College of Business Administration takes its rightful place on the College Campus at University Heights.

LAW SCHOOL'S TENTH ANNIVERSARY

🔊 A brilliant assembly of judicial and legal talent, headed by United States Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, crowded the main ball room of the Hotel Copley Plaza on Tuesday evening, April 9, to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the founding of Boston College Law School. With the Attorney General at the head table was one of the most distinguished groups of guests ever assembled at such an occasion in Boston. cluded the entire Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, Chief Justices Sherman R. Moulton of the Vermont Supreme Court and Edmund W. Flynn of the Rhode Island Supreme Court, numerous judges and court officers of lesser Massachusetts courts and of Federal courts, prominent educationalists, Mayor Maurice J. Tobin, Very Reverend William J. Murphy, S.J., President of Boston College, Reverend William J. Kenealy, S.J., Dean of the Law School, and the Toastmaster of the evening, United States Attorney Henry M. Leen, '29, a member of the first class to be graduated from the Law School.

Speaking over a coast-to-coast radio network, Attorney General Jackson in a vigorous speech attacked as "grossly inaccurate" a criticism of the Supreme Court of the United States by Wendell L. Wilkie which appeared recently in the Saturday Evening Post, in which Wilkie charged that the influence of Roosevelt appointees to the Supreme Court was to be seen in fourteen recent decisions favoring New Deal policies. Attorney General Jackson asserted that in only one of these decisions did a Roosevelt appointee participate, and that his vote did not affect the result.

A re-affirmation of the policies which have governed the conduct of the Law School from its beginning was the keynote of the closing address by Reverend William J. Kenealy, S.J., Dean of the Law School. He emphasized the responsibility which a law school must assume toward the student, towards bench the Class Dinner during our sophomore year when Louis Kelleher eloquently responded to the toast "The Last of 1910," we have dined annually and intend to do so until the Class of 1910 is only a memory. The usual good turnout of the "Old Faithful Guard" is expected at the City Club, May 29, when President Eddie: O'Brien, M.D., calls the roll.

The members of the class rejoice in the promotion by transfer of Rev.. Louis A. Kelleher, D.D., to the pastorate of St. Catherine's Church, Somerville.

Rev. Cornelius A. Foley, '11, formerly,' assistant at the Most Holy Redeemer Church, East Boston, is Parish Priest at St. Mary's Church, Chelmsford I Center.

Rev. Garrett F. Condon has been appointed Pastor of St. Catherine's Church, Graniteville.

James P. Leamy, A.M., '13, of Rutland, Vt., has been appointed U. S. District Judge for Vermont. Judge Leamy is a former president of the Vermont Bar Association.

JOHN S. KEOHANE 12 Acacia Avenue, Chestnut Hill

The Class of 1914 recently held its semi-annual dinner and get-together at the University Club with Rev. Doctor Eric F. MacKenzie presiding. Plans for Alumni Day were discussed. All members of the class are urged to meet at 12 Acacia Avenue at one o'clock, June 10, before proceeding to the festivities at the College.

Right Rev. Monsignor Robert P. Barry, Charity Bureau Director, was guest of honor.

Edword A. Sullivan, president, State Teachers' College at Salem, distinguished himself by his speech at the Diocesan Congress of Catholic Women.

Fathers Tom Ford of Natick, Tom Heogney of Lowell, Ed McLaughlin of Brighton, John Moore of Peabody, and Tom Murphy of Wakefield, celebrated the twenty-second anniversary of their Ordination.

Rev. Charles I. Brown has been promoted to the pastorate of St. Francis' parish at Belfast, Maine.

John W. Kapples, treasurer of the Lincoln Stores, has been elected president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce.

Rev. Louis Gwynn, on sick leave from Canada, died in Boston March 17. R. I. P.

WILLIAM M. CASHIN 179 Robbins Street, Milton

S On Alumni Day, June 10th, the Class will hold a reunion at the College in conjunction with the general alumni gathering. Headquarters for the Class will be in Room 217 in the Tower Building (second floor) and all members are requested to report there before and after the game. Charles S. Fitzgerald is in charge of arrangements for this get-together, assisted by Rev. Remi B. Schuver and J. Vincent Murray.

The dinner which was held at the Hotel Kenmore on April 17th was well attended and a good time was enjoyed. However there are still a few who have not shown up at any of our reunions and in order to get them in the fold a committee was appointed consisting of Rev. Thomas A. Brennan, S.J., Chairman, Rev. Thomas S. Ferris and John J. Graham.

Francis J. Whelan is a wool buyer with Farnsworth, Stevenson and Co.

cnd bar, and towards the public at large, and he pledged the Law School to a continuance of the high standards which have already elicited the commendation of educators, jurists and lawyers.

The success of the Law School dinner was in large measure due to the energetic work of a number of Law School graduates, headed by James J. Curley as chairman, and George V. Olesen as vice-chairman. The publicity was in charge of John J. Barnwell and William E. Bennett, Jr.; the Ticket Committee was composed of Vincent J. Cosgrove, Raymond Dodds and Clement A. O'Brien; John J. Sullivan, Fred Moncewicz and John J. Grigalus were in charge of reservations, and the reception committee comprised Charles W. O'Brien, Frederick V. McMenimen, and Edward U. Lee.

School, open only to Boston College graduates, has just been announced by the Dean. The scholarships have been designated the John B. Creedon, S.J., Scholarships in honor of the popular and able Jesuit educator who served as Regent of the Law School from its establishment until the appointment of Father Kenealy. Both scholarships are for applicants intending to enroll in the Day Division of the Law School. One is a full year, the other a half-year scholarship. Both will be awarded on the basis of the applicant's record in scholastic and extracurricular activities during his four years at the College.

The seventh annual final Law Club argument will be held on Thursday, May 16, at the Law School, and will be open to the public. Four contestants who have survived the series of competitions held throughout the year will match legal wits and learning before three local jurists, for a purse of $200 offered jointly by the President of Boston College and the Honorable John E. Swift, associate justice of the Superior Court of Massachusetts. The case to be argued this year is an equity suit involving the law of wills and trusts. Counsel for the plaintiff, Black, will be John J. Sullivan and Robert Capeless, both of the second year Day Division and both members of the Taney Law Club. Representing the defendants, Scott and Young, are two members of the Marshall Law Club, William J. Sullivan, a second year Evening Division student, and John Cremens of the third year Evening Session.

Mrs. Mary E. Carroll of Springfield, Massachusetts, who last Fall presented the Law School with the personal library of her late husband, Justice James B. Carroll of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court, added further to that kindness recently by making a substantial financial contribution to the Law School Library to augment the collection of Justice Carroll's books, which have been placed in a separate reading room, designated as the James B. Carroll Reading Room.

CATHOLIC BOOK OF THE MONTH

The Catholic Book Club has announced as its June selection, "So Falls the Elm Tree" — a biographical novel by the Rev. John Louis Bonn, S.J., Professor of the Philosophy of Literature in the Graduate School, and of humanitees in the undergraduate departments. The book deals with the life of the American Catholic Builders from 1890 to the present, and is centered around the struggles and successes of Mother Valencia, for forty years superior of the Hospital of St. Francis in Hartford, Conn.

A tale of heroic enterprise and of constant uphill struggle, it treats of a phase of American life too often neglected. This is something new both in the field of biography and of novels. (Macmillan Co., pub. Price $2.50).

On the Heights!

THE UNDERGRADUATE SEMESTER

Robins have always been recognized by the average citizen as the true harbinger of Spring; the arrival of the Circus means vacation days are just around the corner in a youngster's way of thinking; and the appearance of the ALUMNI NEWS means examination days aren't even around the proverbial corner anymore, they are right on top of every Boston College student. It's a funny thing, but the last time we said "hello" to you we were in the throes of a most important cramming session, what with midyear exams in the offing. Now, here we are back again to bring to you on the outside the functionings of the undergraduates here on the Heights, and once again the monster's heavy breath is right on our backs telling us that the final examinations, and for us, sad to say, definitely final, are less than a week away. Be that as it may, final examinations have followed midyear examinations since time immemorial, and time has always marched on during the interim. This year was no exception, and with the passage of time new honors came to both the school and to the students. Coupled with the regular activities of the numerous organizations and clubs, these events made the past several weeks highlights from a student's view-

Headlining the extra-mural achievements was the Hockey team's winning of the New England Intercollegiate Hockey championship under the guidance of Coach John Kelley and Captain Ralph Doherty. This was a feat in itself, but the skating Eagles did it the hard way, going through their league schedule undefeated and turning in a double triumph over B. U. to bring the Donald Sands Memorial trophy back to the Heights after a two year absence.

Not to be outdone by their athletic brothers, the Stylus, the school magazine, furthered the name of Boston College among literary circles when it received national recognition from the National Scholastic Press Association, being rated by this organization as First Class Excellent, an honor given only to three other collegiate publications. Instrumental in the success which the magazine achieved were Joseph T. Vinburg, John C. Moynihan, and Paul K. Duffey, who as Editor, Feature Editor, and Managing Editor, handled all the headaches and complaints that go with such publications. And, in the way of news emanating from the Stylus office, it was announced that Bernard F. Frazier of Newton will edit next year's publication, while Raymond F. Scannell of Hyde Park will assume the Managing Editor's duties.

In the way of intra-mural news, the Sophomore class scored a definite hit when it held its annual class banquet and presented as its feature speaker, Joseph Dineen, the newspaperman who seems to know more about the Penguin than Admiral Byrd himself knows. Dineen, however, was only one of the many celebrities who favored the students with their appearances. Among others who spoke at different times were United States Attorney-General Robert H. Jackson, Joseph Haller, Polish General who is the present minister of the Polish government here in the United States, and Senorita Dil Vara, a militant Mexican Catholic who is recognized as a leader of the far famed Youth Movement of the Catholic Church in Mexico.

Frank is married, has two children and lives in Winthrop. Frank was in Idaho on business when our lost reunion was held and sent in his regrets from there at his inability to attend.

A sad note was included in the replies which came back to our recent reunion invitations. It announced the death in Colorado of our classmate Rev. Gilbert (Patrick) O'Malley. Requiescat in pace!

Art Wholley, married, the fother of two children, a "meagre 210 pounds, a charter member of the Bald Eagles for lo! these many years" is an adjuster of interstate claims in the Massachusetts Division of Unemplayment Compensation. Art has been appointed Captain and playing-Manager of the 1918 Softball team. Any members of the Class desirous of playing should communicate with him at his home, 5 Alicia Road, Dorchester.

A recent note from Lt. Commander Clarence Pike informs us that he is being transferred to Boston.

Charles S. Fitzgerald informs us that he is an "interior decorator" and gives Boston Latin School as his business address. Charlie is married, has one child and is admittedly "5 ft., 10 in., unbald, suffering from corns, coughs, colds, five o'clock shadow and tattletale gray."

William S. Walsh is the Town Clerk in Framingham where he resides with his wife and two children.

Rev. Raymond Sullivan, S.J., writes from Jamaica that he is building a chapel monument on the site of the first church in Jamaica. It is being built with the stone unearthed from the sub-foundation of the old Spanish Cathedral that dates back over 400 years.

Ed. C. Heislein, a member of the bachelor's contingent, is an interior decorator. He makes his home at 10 Orkney Road, Brookline.

Rev. Francis L. McGrath reports from Lowell where he is stationed.

so long!

The arrival of the sixth child in the home of Harold Fagan has been announced. The new arrival is a daughter born April 2.

Paul M. Burke is commander of the Joyce Kilmer Post of The American Legion.

Father David McDonald, always a faithful B. C. supporter, celebrated Mass on Alumni Communion Sunday at St. Andrew's Church, Forest Hills. Over two hundred members of the West Roxbury B. C. Club were present at the Mass and the Communion Breakfast that followed.

Attorney Harold W. Sullivan, who was the Democratic nominee for Attorney General in 1930, when he received over half a million votes, has announced his intention of again seeking that office.

Dr. Vincent J. Kelley was the first speaker in the series of health talks sponsored by the Hyde Park Kiwanis Club. His subject was "What You Should Know About Ear, Nose, and Throat."

Mark F. Russo, dramatic coach at Latin School for many years, coached the cast of a play "What a Life," presented by the Boston Elementary Teachers' Club at Latin School, May 9 and 10. The proceds of the play were donated to a fund to buy milk for undernourished children in the Boston public schools.

Stephen Griffin recently had his picture in the paper for acting as chairman of a bowling tournament held at Shanley's Alleys on Washington St. The class extends its sympathy to James E. O'Dowd of Mechanic Arts High School faculty who recently lost his father.

George T. White, Secretary of the Connecticut B. C. Club, is a basket-ball official in the Ivy League.

Capt. Carl G. Swansan, a director of the B. C. Club of Connecticut, was Chairman of the Military Boll and Reception of the Second Company, Governor's Foot Guard held in New Haven on March 1.

NATHANIEL J. HASENFUS 15 Kirk Street, West Roxbury

John Barry, '22, president of Class of 1914, Mason School, Newton Center, now War Editor of the Boston Globe, and I, always rushed over to the old Columbus Avenue grounds in 1913 Taking their cues from the French Academy which ventured forth with a publication of its own the Business School and the Classical Department brought forth publications which even in their infancy augur well for future efforts by these same groups. The business of editing the former belongs to John Glennon, while John DeCosta is the head man for the latter.

At the same time that these papers made it known that they were going to be with us, the Golf and Tennis teams announced that they were going to leave us for a fortnight since it was Easter-tide. So, with their bags over their shoulders, Captain Jack Sheehy and Manager Pat Rafferty led a five man expedition into the South to oppose the Johnny Reb divot diggers from every representative college south of the Mason-Dixon line. The other members of the squad which had surprising success on the trip which brought them through the Virginias, Carolinas and hinterlands were Paul Brooks, John Iarrobino, and Ned Martin.

The Tennis squad which included in its ranks Gerard Converse, Elmore Campbell, Gene Sullivan, and Bill Powers, although routed in its matches which included one with Clemson College, had the distinction of covering 3000 miles on its trip and getting back to classes on time.

Back in school again, with the vacation only a memory, Alpha Sigma Nu, the Jesuit honor society, announced that Henry McMahon had been elected President of the society, with Frank Burns of West Roxbury, Vice-President. At the same time it was announced that eight Juniors had been admitted to take the place of the outgoing members. Then, on the heels of this announcement came word that the Fulton Debating Society had made final arrangements for its prize debate. After a series of trials the finalists were selected and these boys competed before a select board of judges comprised of Mr. Daniel J. Gallagher, '92, Rt. Rev. Mgr. Michael J. Splaine, '97, and Mr. William T. Miller, '04, all former winners of the Fulton Prize Medal. The final choice of the judges was Paul Greeley of Somerville.

The Senior Year Book, Sub Turri, came into the limelight by conducting its class poll of the Mosts and the Bests, something that Senior classes have done ever since the first year book made its appearance. But this year a controversy arose over the selection of the best looking, and in desperation, the editors decided to conduct a re-run, allowing only the feminine voters to cast ballots at a contest which was held at the annual dance sponsored by the group. After checking and re-checking the ballot it was decided that neither of the original choices had won, but on the contrary the best looking was a last minute entry sponsored by the Beagle Hunt Club, a beautiful beagle dog.

Junior Week was the next affair on the calendar and was outstanding in that it was no different from previous Junior Weeks, from the opening Communion Breakfast to the Junior Prom which was described the next day as "the best prom yet," as all proms have been annually described. Highlighting the week was the surprise visit of Eddie Anderson, better known as "Jack Benny's Rochester," to the Smoker.

With the arrival of the fair weather the athletic teams took to the open, and it was not long before Coach Frank Leahy had his footballers digging up the turf in the annual Spring conditioning sessions which went along uninterrupted until the second week of this month when an exhibition game was staged as a finale before the actual season begins in September. And speaking of football, the Athletic Association announced that Centre had been signed to the football schedule for next year. The game is to be played on Alumni Field. September 21st.

On the other side of the field Coaches Ryder and Maguire shared the spotlight with their athletes. First the baseball team came into the fore with a 3-1 victory over Fordham, and then the track team turned in a surprise win over Maine in a dual meet. The second outing of the nine saw them deadlocked with the Harvard Grads 6-6 after eleven innings. Then when everybody was talking about them, the boys came up with one of those days when everything goes wrong, the result being a 6-1 victory for St. John's University of Brooklyn. The Track team in its only other meet was outpointed by Fred Tootell's Rhode Island State squad.

Following the general theme of Spring when one's fancy changes from overcoats to topcoats, and heavy oil to light oil, not to mention storm doors to screen doors, The Heights also underwent a change when Editors Arthur V. Cullen, John Ryan, Jim Kean and Gerry Converse gave up their columns to make way for a new staff headed by Thomas Galligan of Watertown, with Paul Post, Albert Arsenault and Edward Weiss as assistants. Just another method of telling the Seniors that its time to get down the proof of an uncaused first cause, or in other words Orals are coming. So, with this warning in our ears we are taking our leave of you in the hopes that we too will soon become one of you.

JAMES M. KEAN, '40.

WITH THE ATHLETES

One year of sport is hardly over, when it's time to look ahead to another.

It doesn't cost anything to look ahead either, and from this end a glance at the 1940-41 Boston College sports picture indicates a pleasant semester in store for Eagle followers. The Bowl bid has aroused unparalleled interest in Frank Leahy's football eleven, and the Bowl defeat cannot dim that enthusiasm one bit. Hockey prospects are even brighter than were those of the New England league champions last winter. And dark clouds, although more numerous, are none the less scarce on baseball and track horizons.

The year now ending brought new athletic recognition to Boston College. The Cotton Bowl invitation brought greater national honor to the 1939 Eagles than any other of the mighty teams of the past could gain. In its championship sextet, hockey reached its highest peak since the golden days of the 1920's. Baseball, battling through an up and down season, still has success ahead, just on the other side of two or three victories over Holy Cross. Track produced several outstanding individual competitors and showed the Eagles to possess surprising dual strength on the cinders.

The year 1939-40 was indeed a successful one for Boston College athletic fortunes and graduates of this June may well take a stand beside the old grads of other famed years in talking about the Eagles "in my time. . . . '

But past honors, although not forgotten, are put aside now as Eagle sport followers, graduate and student alike, look ahead to what may be even greater success in 1940-41. In track, for instance, they can look to several capable competitors on their way up from the freshman squad. Jack O'Connor, a mid-and 1914, to see B. C. and Jack's uncle, Msgr, Robert P. Barry, B. C. baseball captain in 1914. And was I proud of the B. C. uniform that Fr. McFadden, S.J., faculty director of athletics, gave me as mascot for Jim Linehan's team. Mascots had their substitutes in those old days, too, for once when I was in Jug and Fr. Brock refused to listen to reason, John Mc-Kearin, now well up in the Baston Gas Co. held the fort for me in the St. Anselm's game. What memories of those days! Steve Fitzgerald and Ned Killian killed in the war-the splendid 5-4 victory over a great Georgetown team and a 2-1 win over an Eastern championship Tufts team with Leo Halloran, '16, pitching -Skinny Gateley's cheer-leading in 1914-15-16!

Fr. James H. Doyle, '22 president, is with the Catholic Charitable Bureau. Henry J. Smith has just recovered from a serious illness. Arthur K. Dowd is in the treasurer's office at Lever Brothers, Combridge. Heaphy is doing well in law at Bev-William Roche is teaching Latin at Boston Latin School. Tom Mahan, Latin School, is taking a sabbatical leave and is in California for the half year. Arthur Mullin is contracting in Brookline. Dr. Daniel McSweeney recently took an important part in a conference of obstetricians at Quincy. George McKim has finished the year as principal of Roxbury Evening High School. Henry McDermott is still with National Biscuit Company. Rev. Thomas J. Riley is on the faculty at St. John's Semi-William Leavey, B. C. H. S., '18, has been ill for 17 years and would be pleased to hear from B. C., '22, at his home, 115 Trowbridge Street, Cambridge.

Al Hedderman, a loyal B. C. man, never misses a B. C. gathering. Hubert Gilgan is principal of Stetson High School, Randolph. Rev. Cornelius Mason and Rev. William Conley are both at St. Peter's in Dorchester. Arthus Cusick has joined brothers Ed and Dick in Chicago. Leonard Dolan is combining law and real estate. Where is Rowlandson? Leonard Healy reports a splendid year in the engraving business. A correspondent sends in this note: "How about a regular Boston for Arthur Morrissey and his seven darling daughters? Daughter No. 7 for Arthur, head of Latin Department at Somerville High School, arrived on February 2nd." How about a little action on a "22" table for Alumni Day? Let's get together—our 20th anniversary is only the year after next. Let's get the ball rolling.

S. Albert Cragin, M.A., '22, has been made master of the Dearborn School, Roxbury. Eddie Bell is playing on the George Wright Four Ball team in the Bay State Golf League. The class wishes to express its deepest sympathy to Gene Fanning on the death of his wife.

The engagement of John D. Kelley, Librarian at the Somerville Public Library, to Miss Mary Barry of Somerville, was announced recently.

dle distance man, should fit well into Jack Ryder's scheme of things, while little Gil Walker will provide the Eagles with a competitor for the championship dashes at the large New York and Boston indoor meets.

The trackmen lose Captain Bill Gilligan and Ed Swenson from the shot and weight throwing forces and several steady point-getters from among the Eagle runners. But Al Morro, the discus throwing champion, Joe Zabilski, a heavy point-getter in the field events, as well as Joe Shea, runner; John MacNeil, hurdler; Bill Harkins, two miler; and Ralph Ryan, high jumper, will be back another year. With the up and coming freshman stars and several upperclass "placers" to help them, they should put Boston College names in the summary of winners at the winter championship meets and provide new balance for the Eagles in the dual meets of a 1941 model spring.

Baseball, on the other hand, will be racked by graduation. Captain Frank Burns, outfielder; Bob Cromwell, second baseman; Jim Byrne, catcher; Brad Martin, outfielder; and four pitchers, Connie McGrath, Fred Leahy, Jack Leary and Bob McGovern, go the way of all graduates in June. In their stead, Fred Maguire must build from his returning infielders, Ed Sawyer, Bob Harris, Jack Callahan and Tom Dawson, as well as Frank Davis, his lone outfield veteran, and a pitching staff of underclassmen headed by sophomore Dick Ferriter. The freshman nine offers little help for the future, but Maguire with typical Holy Cross ingenuity has a decided knack for producing ball teams where ball teams did not seem to exist.

One thing though, the Eagles may boast a brother battery in 1941, as Larry Ferriter, the frosh catcher, comes along to join Brother Dick, the varsity chucker, next spring. The lads will hereafter be known as Wes and Rick Ferriter around University Heights.

Brothers or not, however, "Snooks" Kelley is smiling. He loses Captain Ralph Dougherty, alone, of his championship sextet and with a wealth of freshman material to balance the play of the sensational 1939 first Eagle line, hockey prospects indeed are bright ones. The Eagles will have that first line of Captain-elect John Pryor, Ray Chaisson and Al "Fishy" Dumond back again intact with the regular points, Bob Mee and Larry Houle, to back them up.

The goal tender job may create a bit of difficulty, but with that settled the Eagles will be favorites not only to recapture the New England league title, but also to upset a few of the more powerful American and Canadian college teams they will meet. Kelley, himself, admitted last winter that the inexperience of his sophomore studded team would hold the skaters back some, but with that inexperience remedied by a year's action there seems little to hold them back come the next freeze.

And before the freeze comes football, a trip to Tulane and, perhaps, another fine season for the forces of Coach Frank W. Leahy. It is sufficient matter for doubt whether ever before there has been such widespread interest in Eagle football fortunes. Fully 5000 fans turned out for a seemingly unappealing intra-squad spring game and, despite baseball and the Red Sox drive for a pennant, the Eagles are a constant topic of down town conversation.

The aforementioned intra-squad game served further to stimulate that aforementioned conversation and also to give a preview of what may be expected from the lads in the fall. The freshman backs, "Big Mike" Holovak, Mickey Connolly and Ted Williams, looked to have the makings and the yearling linemen looked average for the off-season. "Toz," Gene Goodreault, George Kerr and the rest of the returning veterans reflected their 1939 class and, while the graduating Schwotzer, Ananis, Cignetti and Harrison showed that their loss will indeed be felt, the 5000 fans left satisfied and waiting for September.

On the whole grid material and prospects look to be even better for 1940 than they were a year ago, but the coming schedule is proportionately tougher and the Eagles will need to be plenty good and have plenty of good luck to equal last season's record. Right now, however, it's impossible for Eagle followers to conjure up anything but an undefeated season, with Tulane swamped and one glorious victory over Holy Cross followed by another next November.

JOSEPH W. McKENNEY.

ALUMNI GLEE CLUB'S CONCERT

👣 On Sunday evening, April 28th, the Alumni Glee Club presented its second annual concert at Jordan Hall to a large and enthusiastic audience. The selections were drawn from both liturgical and secular music, their choice being warmly commended by the press.

Writing in the Boston Post of Monday, April 29th, Mr. Warren Storey Smith, dean of Boston music critics, said:

. . . one cannot too warmly commend the serious dignified, well-varied program offered at Jordan Hall last evening by the Boston College Alumni Glee Club under the direction of Theodore N. Marier. Nor was the singing of the group unworthy of the music which it sang. Evidently a musician of fine taste, Mr. Marier has trained his choir to sing with all regard for such matters as tone, phrasing, and interpretation. The group is rather small, as such choruses go, and cannot produce large sonorities, but its dynamic scale is so well regulated that the forces at hand suffice.'

The Boston Globe said in part:

"... the concert last night gave credit to the group of fine young singers and the competent, thorough direction of Theodore N. Marier. Under his baton the compositions of favorite masters were beautifully and effectively rendered. "... 'Let Their Celestial Concerts' drew merited applause."
"... the Glee Club impressively sang 'Dirge for Two Veterans.' "

The guest artist of the concert was the well-known Boston pianist, Paul Bregor, whose brilliant playing was a worthy companion to the work of the Club. James A. Ecker, pianist, and Francis J. Mahler, organist, provided the accompaniments.

At its business meeting held on May 5th the Glee Club elected the following to office in the organization for the season of 1940-1941:

Thomas J. Hayes, '27, President.

Samuel Leavis, Jr., '36, Vice-President. John N. Burns, '36, Treasurer. Karl H. Miethe, '35, Secretary.

Following the business meeting, the Club heard recordings of the program which were made the night of the concert.

North Tiverton, R. I. Tom was formerly attached to the faculty of Duquesne University, Pittsburgh.

Walter A. Conway recently announced the removal of his insurance office to 254 Essex Street, Salem.

Fr. Raymond B. Bourgain is principal of Coyle High School in Taunton. Father Bourgoin is also editor of "Teach," the diocesan publication, Rev. Hugh B. Kearns was recently transferred from Beaumont to Galveston, Texas.

WILLIAM ARTHUR REILLY 14 Arborway, Jamaica Plain

The lt is with regret that we must report the passing of another of our John R. Curry, a class members. teacher in the Cambridge schools, died in March of this year.

A recent Sunday feature story rated the bridge players of New England and our own George Verde was not only listed among the first four in New England but among the nation's great bridge players. Perhaps we will be able to get George to give the Class a few lessons at the fifteenth anniversary celebration.

For the purpose of making arrangements for the celebration this June, a committee met at the Hotel Kenmore recently and the Class is awaiting word as to the final arrangements.

Boston College will have another Dayle on its football team. William, J., Jr. was born in March and Neal O'Callahan is the godfather.

Fred Mahony, now one of Boston's leading real estate men; George Smith, President of the Life Underwriters' Association, and John Hanrahan, owner of the Albany Carpet Cleaning Company, rank among the economic royalists of the Class. Not only did they follow the football team to Texas but they returned again later to the South for a vacation.

Steve Patten was passing out cigars one day a couple of months ago. A son was born to the Patten's household, the first child after twelve years of married life.

The sympathy of the Class is extended to Charles O. Monohan on the occasion of the death of his father early in April.

WILLIAM J. CUNNINGHAM 40 Tennyson Street, West Roxbury

The class held an interesting, informal meeting at the Kenmore on April 16 at which Ed McKeever and Fred Maguire were present. One of those "tip-the-chair-against-the-wall" affairs where sports questions were discussed pro and con.

Father Walter Bruce McCracken is with the 1107 Co., CCC, in New Hampshire. Father Bruce covered 12 camps a month for the past 25 months and his CCC boys recently had a dinner for him celebrating that "silver jubilee" of 25 months. Father Bruce enjoys our bulletins and wishes to be remembered to all the boys.

We're looking forward to the resumption of the Alumni Softball League. Tom Herlihy recommends it to the fat boys-he lost 24 pounds last spring chasing the belts of the opposition. Communicate with the President of your local B. C. Club, if you want to get in the League.

The class is looking forward to Alumni Day in June. The past several years a grand time has been had by all. Some plans are in the air and we hope to have the class News-Bulletin out before that day.

John Cohan is with Bell Realty in Roslindale

Al Zirpalo looks better than ever, is teaching in Medford and has a fine family of three.

Chris Dinsmore and Chris Sheehy of Lawrence are two fellows we'd like to hear from.

Dr. John Fallon's dental practice in Roslindale is keeping Johnny a busy fellow-little chance to practice that "whiskey tenor" of his.

Dr. Eddie Flynn looks well after having dropped a few pounds of weight. And did you notice Vice-President Dr. Garman's improved stream-lined chassis?

THOMAS C. HEFFERNAN 17 Arbroth Street, Dorchester

The spring dinner of the class was held at the Hotel Lenox on May 15th. Treasurer John Taomey wore a broad smile as he counted more than enough present to meet the generous guarantee to the management. President Marnell extended congratulations to Joe Hopkinson on the birth

alumni Bowling League

Adams Square is strangely quiet these Monday nights. longer does the passerby hear the screams of anguish and the moans of despair that once filled the air. No longer does "Sullivan's" (remember?) ring with "if" scores, no more are bitter tears shed into the "quick ones" between strings.

The reason for all this? The Bowling League has folded its tents for the year. A season filled with excitement and laughs from its first week to its last has been completed. A season that saw the League championship decided only on the last night!

Twenty-seven matches were rolled and it is to the credit of the members that despite a very difficult winter, few matches were forfeited. More than one hundred members of the alumni rolled during the season and of these more than ninety were regulars.

The League banquet was held at the Hotel Lenox on April Here, after enjoying a fine dinner, elections were held and individual and team prizes awarded.

Officers for the coming year are—Jim McGuire, '34, Malden-Medford-Melrose, President; Jim Powers, '33, Arlington, Treasurer; Ray Scott, '26, Cambridge, Secretary.

Prizes were awarded to the first five teams; to the first five individual averages; individual single and three string and team single and three string total. In addition two prizes for improvement were given. The John A. Ecker Memorial Trophy, won last year by Cambridge "A", was captured this year by Dorchester "A", League Champions. The members of the winning team were: William H. Marnell, '27; Charles J. Leonard, '28; John F. Monahan, '24; John C. Holbrow, '24; Jeremiah J. McCarthy, '30, and John J. McDonald, '32.

It is hoped that this coming year—the League's third will find a larger enrollment especially from among the clubs in the Boston area not now represented by teams. They will be doing themselves and the Alumni Association a service by entering the competition.

ALUMNI SOFTBALL LEAGUE

The Alumni Softball League will open its second season on June 17th with appropriate ceremonies. According o recent reports, the parade to the flagpole will be led by Captain J. Robert Brawley and his "nine old men" who represent the Class of 1920 in the competition.

Last year teams representing nineteen Boston College Clubs and the Class of 1920 played through a ten-game schedule. The games were played on Monday and Tuesday at the Heights. Each team plays one game weekly. Games start promptly at 6.30 and are generally concluded before eight o'clock.

Any alumnus desiring to play this summer should communicate with the president of his local Boston College Club. of a second child, William Joseph, who arrived February 18th. Impromptu speeches of class mates contributed to a merry evening.

David J. Sullivon, now a practising attorney in Webster, was married last July to Miss Mary B. Sheridan of Holliston. Dave's latchstring is always up for any class mate travelling Webster-ward.

From Medway comes the news that Bob O'Donnell is now in the shoe manufacturing business.

Nearer home, Jack Conway is now managing real estate for Boston banks.

Rev. Walter J. Leach is now directing productions of the St. Cecilia Players. His latest triumph, a fast-moving modern revue, was entitled "A Day at the Circus."

Bill Marnell—or "Captain" Bill—led the Dorchester Team "A" to a spectacular triumph in the Alumni Bowling League. Francis X. Sullivan was third highest in individual averages.

Jim Logue and Tom O'Brien are regular attendants at the Catholic Alumni Sodality.

P. S. Thanks for the note, Dave. How about a line now and then from some of the distant or long absent classmates, particularly those in New York!

EUGENE L. McLAUGHLIN 491 Weld Street, West Roxbury

We are expecting the usual grand turnout for Alumni Day. All members of the Class will meet at the ball game in the section reserved for '29 men and will sit together at the dinner.

The Alumni Association this year plans to have the voting for Alumni officers by mail. As usual, only those who have paid their dues are eligible to vote. All who contributed to our Class Gift Drive last June are members of the Loyalty Fund and will receive a ballot.

Ed Murphy, President of the Dorchester B. C. Club and Charles Adams, President of the Somerville Club, were on the Nominating Committee.

Tom Fay, Paul McManus, Harry Butler and Joseph Cannell will be ordained at Weston in June.

Fathers Leo O'Keefe and Leo Muldoon were ordained last year and the coming year will doubtless find them

ALUMNI DAY

Despite the reluctant burgeoning of spring, another Commencement draws near. Again newspaper compositors sigh, and steel themselves for endless lists of graduates. Again the arbiter elegantium of each institution of high learning ponders the niceties of precedence. Commencement Day speakers fondly weigh phrases for their addresses, balancing the jocose against the weighty, the urbane against the idealistic. Employment managers harden hearts already perforce hard, and await the siege. Seniors count the minutes.

To the Alumnus, Commencement Week means more than a milestone in a lengthening road. It means one day of reunion, one night of frivolity. This year Alumni Day is June 10. The program of recent years will again be followed. At 3.00 P. M. there will be a baseball game with Holy Cross. Following the game, dinner will be served in the Tower Building. Following dinner, the exercises in the Library. The panel of speakers will be select and limited, chosen rather for their entertaining than their staying powers. Following the speakers, the Alumni Show.

As ever, the shroud of inviolable secrecy surrounds this year's presentation of the Ham-and-Eggers. A precedent has been established for treating Boston College and its institutions with less than reverential respect. Persistent rumor has it that once more the sock and buskin, and more particularly the former, will make merry at Alma Mater's expense. But from what auarter The Heights will be stormed, the strategists preserve as their secret. This only they will reveal, that once more Boston College's wellestablished ability to laugh at itself will be in requisition. This power is denied to all but those who are aware of the soundness of their own position.

BRICKS AND MORTAR

The story is told of a New England community which once levied a poll tax on the students of a college located within its limits. On town meeting day the students exercised their legal rights. One of their number moved that the community erect a high school made of marble, one mile long and half a mile high. Since gown outnumbered town, the motion was triumphantly carried. This monumental reductio ad absurdum never became more than a pleasant fantasy, yet there are many stages in a reduction before the absurd is reached. Many American towns have school buildings that are grandiose in terms of communities that manage to meet their bonded indebtedness by underpaying their teachers. When next one gazes at the impressive proportions of one's local Senior High School, with its cavernous auditorium, its thunderously big gymnasium, its meticulously groomed stadium where local pride is satiated on Saturday by proof of academic superiority over one's equally impressive neighbor, expressed in terms of the doublewingback, it is sobering to recall that the average American school teacher receives an annual salary approximately equal to the prevailing wages at the local five-and-tens.

But what of the privately endowed institution of higher learning? Has it been less crassly materialistic in its growth? Not by that New England measure of indefinite but enormous distance, not by a dam sight. One is also told of the New England institution of higher learning which receved a prodigious sum from an aging merchant prince. A visiting lecturer, a Frenchman from the University of Paris, inguired anxiously about the proposed disposition of this abounding manna. Through his alert mind, compounded of that austere devotion to scholarship, that rapid and logical penetration, that soaring imagination so nicely coupled with a very definite knowledge of what a franc is worth which makes up the intellect of an intelligent Frenchman, there coursed roseate visions of what a university might be. He was told that it was to be used to build more buildings. In his mind's eye was a picture of that venerable architectural relic, his own university, with its living, vivid thought and its sluggish plumbing. Before his physical eye was an already impressive panorama of educational temples and Gothic cathedrals of learning. His reaction was expressed in one of those philologically baffling French expletives which are translated by subdued periphrases in the notes of American textbooks!

That indigenous educational phenomenon, the Parent-Teacher Association, is eloquently unanimous in its assertion that our schools are run for the benefit of the students. Socrates' school was so run, but its sessions were held at busy street corners in Athens. So was the school of Plato, but its physical equipment was a shaded walk in a pleasant grove. Mark Hopkins on one end of a log and a student on the other was one distinguished American's defini-Could only the Parenttion of a college. Teacher Association lure back from the shades the spirits of Francois Rabelais, Miguel de Cervantes, Geoffrey Chaucer, and Dean Swift to report on the history of American education, would they agree that our schools and colleges have been run for the benefit of the students? Or would it seem, to their reprehensively irreverent minds, that they have been run for the benefit of the building trades?

THE RAINY DAY

One of the greatest advantages that the system of free public education in America possesses is the fact that beside it flourishes the system of endowed, private education. Competition gives spice to education as to life in general. In the final, hard analysis, the endowed school has but one reason for existence; it must be better than the public school. may be better because of its more rigid academic standards, because of its richer opportunities for individualized instruction, because of its capacity for setting a more specific goal and hewing a more direct academic path towards it. On a different plane is the advantage it possesses in having within its power the desirable nexus between religious and academic To these advantages, the endowed university possesses others denied to the state university. It is more flexible, less subject to control by individuals unsympothetic towards and unappreciative of its purposes, richer in that freedom of the intellect which men so different as Voltaire and St. Thomas More ranked among the supreme blessings. That is not to say that such potential superiority is always achieved in actuality.

But Carlyle's gloomy science, economics, has its say in this as in other things. One recalls, with some faint amusement, the alarums of the twenties, when alarmists saw the future of private education imperilled by legislative action. The once notorious Oregon school law has long since been bound in calf and dropped into the mildewed limbo of forgotten laws. But in those pleasant days when knights errant from the Fulton regaled Knights of Columbus with the iniquities of their favorite 'attack on our institutions', a far more potent attack lurked in the darkness beyond that corner around which prosperity was to vanish. The private institution of learning feeds upon itself; current income never meets running expenses, and the balance comes from endowment. This basic law of educational economics, often adverted to in these columns, needs neither legislator nor executive It is ironical that some of our most respected institutions of higher learning came into being as post-mortem memorials to the aggrandizing capacity of men who skimmed the rich cream off a new continent. It is ironical that the self-interest of our richest institutions of learning, most of which are laudably devoted to promoting the general welfare, actually dictates the most benighted economic and social stand-pattism. Every diminution of the income from property, every victory won by human rights over property rights, is a blow to the endowed college. It would be one of economics' supremely ironic jests if our endowed universities were most effectively to promote the ideal of social justice by nursing to a full flowering the seeds of their own destruction.

Nowhere in the land is there a stronger voice for the rights of man over the rights of things than in our privately endowed universities. Yet many of them are feeling the pinch bitterly. The measures taken to meet the economic stringency resulting from the decreased income from investments are various. Student admissions are restricted, faculties are pared, a device by no means unknown to industry changing the title of a job as a means of effecting a drastic salary reduction — is common. There are instructors and lecturers where once there were professors. There are very few who wish to see private education disappear, yet it will disappear in part unless new sinews of strength are given it. If one with no flair for such abstractions may venture an algebraic utterance, let x equal the income from investments that kept the educational keel steady in 1930. If y represents the loss of investment between 1930 and 1940, it follows that an income of x plus y is necessary today to preserve the academic constant. Thus increased endowments are today essential, not to add to the universities' services, but to retain what they now The moral is clear. The endowments offer. of the past have been largely the munificent gestures of those of lordly wealth, and have found expression chiefly in the university's physical plant. Today there is need of bequests of all sizes, self-effacing bequests to keep the plant running. Such bequests would, for example, make it possible for Boston College to continue to serve the community as it has in the past.

OLD MAN'S GAME

The last string has been rolled, the last spare missed, the last alibi writ on water; the bowling season is done. Dorchester "A" has snared the gonfalon. Perhaps other teams knocked over more pins, but in this game, too, first downs do not score points. "Solvitur acrishiems," and along with the spring and breezes Favonian comes another pastime.

The Alumni Softball League will again function. To those of moderately limber joints, of medium-hard arteries, of intermittent wind and semi-soundness of limb, the game has its appeal.

To those who retain some vestiges of their youthful speed and dexterity, or fancy that such attributes are theirs, the Softball League holds open welcoming arms. Such should inquire of their local B. C. club.

Very Rev. William J. Murphy, S.J., Rector Boston College, Chestnut Hill, Mass.

Dear Father Rector:

As the first year of the Alumni Loyalty Fund draws to a close, it is fitting that those who have administered the Fund should submit to you a detailed financial statement and a summary of their chief accomplishments.

Through the Loyalty Fund, augmented by the net proceeds of such functions as the Alumni Ball and the Alumni Concert, the Association has been enabled not only to meet the normal running expenses of the organization, but also to further the interests of Boston College in a very significant and substantial manner.

Twenty-eight thousand copies of "Alumni News" and twenty-two thousand personal communications have brought to our Alumni throughout the world news of the activities of Boston College in all departments. Through the regular issues of our magazine, Father Rector has been able to address frequent messages to Boston College men. Members of the Faculty have also had the opportunity to publish articles in their chosen fields. The athletic department has likewise benefited by this means of publicity. Not the least significant result of the establishment of "Alumni News" has been the favorable reflection of Alumni spirit as shown in a definite increase in the number and amount of contributions.

Although the aims of the Alumni Ball were primarily social and financial, and those of the "Cotton Bowl Special" chiefly athletic, both ventures served to enhance the prestige of Alma Mater, the former in Greater Boston, the latter in distant Texas. The concert of the Alumni Musical Organization brought the college to the forefront of cultured Boston and established a tradition that has brought renown. The first Universal Communion Sunday, in which forty-three local chapters of Alumni participated, reminded the Catholic and non-Catholic world that the aim of Boston College is primarily religious and that Faith is the proudest possession of her

Alumni.

During the year the local chapters, or "clubs," have increased their activities. Eighteen new units have been organized. These groups are powerful factors in making Boston College better known in their communities. Several chapters have established scholarships, total or partial. Others by awarding medals, by sponsoring intercollegiate debates, by conducting oratorical contests, and in general by making known to capable high school boys the advantages of an education at Boston College, have attracted the thoughts and desires of many to the Heights.

Other events and functions might also be cited to exemplify further the extent of Alumni activity. Sufficient has been stated, however, to indicate that the loyalty of the Alumni, the counsel of Father Low, and your encouragement, Father Rector, have enabled the Alumni Association to carry on the high traditions inherited from former administrations.

We are deeply grateful, Father Rector, for your kind, generous, and effective leadership. We feel certain, too, that in the year before us we shall be able to consolidate our gains and broaden our scope.

Very respectfully yours,

FRANCIS J. ROLAND.

President.

Mr. Francis J. Roland, President, Boston College Alumni Association, Chestnut Hill, Mass.

Dear Mr. Roland:

I have received your annual report of the Alumni Association and the financial statement for the past year, and I wish to congratulate you and the members of the Executive Board upon your excellent work. The response to the Communion Breakfast in March was a magnificent testimony to the effectiveness of the mission of the College, and was a source of great strength to those who realize the paramount importance of the Catholic way of life in this critical hour.

In a different field, the Alumni Concert was an outstanding mark of progress. The meetings of the various clubs, the scholarship activities, the very evident desire of the members of the Alumni to unite in different combinations, are all signs of the renewed Alumni spirit. But to promote these many endeavors, a strong, alert and efficient organization was necessary.

The success of your efforts is the best compliment to your generous and unsparing work.

Be assured that the College is deeply grateful to you.

Very sincerely yours,

WILLIAM J. MURPHY, S.J.

President.

The annual banquet was held at the Hotel Lenox on Tuesday, April 23, with about seventy-five present. Our adopted Father, Reverend Francis V. Sullivan, S.J., was the guest of honor. Reverend James Keyes, S.J., and Coach Frank Leahy dropped in at our invitation.

At a business meeting held at the conclusion of the banquet, John Convery was unanimously elected President for our tenth anniversary. He was empowered to select a committee of ten, with "Father Frank" as adviser, to formulate plans for our celebration in June. If any of you have any suggestions to offer, or any information regarding the whereabouts of any member of the Class of 1930, John Convery would appreciate your writing to him at 15 Forest Avenue, Everett, Mass.

Impressions from the banquet: An almost universal tendency to added weight here and there, but mostly here - Paddy Creedon's insistence that the artist sketch an unwilling subject, Arthur Cestaro - Father Frank Sullivan having last none of his remarkable sense of humor - Reverend Fathers, doctors, lawyers, school teachers, and Uncle Sam's men comprising our group for the most part ---Father Keyes doing his best to remember all the names - Bill Butler apparently jousting with the inroads of corpulence - Red Hoban entertaining friends with that story about the police examination - Irving Stackpole insisting upon his point in his old time manner - Tom Walsh from Weston - Jim Langan sitting quietly - Bill Sullivan informing us with the same contagious smile that the class treasury was empty - Jim McGann unchanged - talk shifting constantly to events during our four years at the College - a letter from Brendan McNally informing us that he, Joseph Murphy, Joseph Martus, Neil Donahue, Eugene Burns, and John Kelleher are all members of the Ordination Class at Weston College --groups congregating as they used to in the lunch room - queries relative to the identity of this one or that ane muttered satto vace to companions as this one or that one approached - the smile and hearty handshake when the deficiency had been supplied — news that Bill Tobin was working for the Railway Mails in New York and is to be married soon - the desire to know about some of the fellows whom we haven't seen in recent years - and farewells until Alumni Day.

Leo P. Moran was a member of the Boston College team which won the Intercollegiate Bowling championship sponsored by the University Club. Other members of the team were Herb O'Connor, '31; Jerry O'Connor, '34; Joe Beaver, '24; Ed Cashin, '34; Bill Killion, '28; Frank Phelan, '28; John Sennott, '32, and Joe Connor, '29. Leo also showed among the prize winners by copping the High Three String Handicap Trophy.

Ed Steele is associated in the practice of law with former Lt. Gov. Kelly. Ed joined the ranks of the Benedicts last year.

Latest reports received at the Alumni Office have it that Dr. Francis J. West has offices at 900 Washington Street, Dorchester, Mass., where he is pursuing a general practice in medicine. Frank is well married, we are told, now being the father of two children.

Charlie Saya is a field investigator in the Unemployment Compensation Department of the Commonwealth.

Paul Callahan is employed in the Operations Department of the Tidewater Oil Co. Paul is still resident in Revere.

Frank Johnson is a teacher on the High School staff at Peabody.

Congratulations are in order for Kevin P. Hern, Esquire, recently appointed an Assistant Corporation Counsel in the City of Boston Law Department.

Donald Carey is engaged in the practice of law at 11 Beacon Street, Boston.

Cigars are again being dispensed by envelope-man Al Fitzgerald, consequent upon the birth of a daughter, the same being the third child in Al's expanding family.

Larry Healey is now assigned to the Boston office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

From Minneapolis comes word that James T. Moynihan is now residing there. James is associated with the Civil Aeronautics Authority and is the representative of that agency in that vicinity.

Listeners to the radio broadcasts of the Ford Hall Forum have been pleased to hear the familiar voice of Ed Connelly who speaks on his chosen subject of specialization, industrial relation.

At Lowell Jack Casserly is engaged in investigation work for the Massachusetts State Employment Compensation Division.

The annual class reunion was held at the Hotel Lenox on Tuesday, April 23. There were approximately 75 members of the class in attendance to have dinner and to hear Coach Frank Leahy, Father James W. Keyes, S.J., and Father Frank Sullivan, S.J., as guest speakers. Tommy Meagher, Class President, presided at the gathering.

It has been announced that Jack O'Brien and Al Morelli will again act as hosts at a clambake and get-together to be given on Sunday, June 16 next, at the O'Brien Lodge in Hopkinton. Those who were present at last year's clambake can well recommend the quality and abundance of the Hopkinton hospitality. Final arrangements will be announced at the College on Alumni Day, June 10, when the class will hald a meeting in conjunction with the Alumni Day festivities. Upon your arrival at the College call at the Alumni Office and find out where the headquarters for '31 will be.

Anyone interested in floor coverings should consult Ralph Cochrane who is associated with his father, H. A. Cochrane & Company, 18 Sudbury Street, Boston. They carry one of the largest lines of linoleum and other floor coverings in the city.

The marriage of John E. Reinhardt to the former Lillian Frances Murphy was solemnized at St. Anthony's Church in Allston on Monday, March 25.

Rev. John W. Doherty, S.J., will be ordained in June.

Art Conway is director of Vocational Guidance in the Everett schools.

John McCutcheon is director of the Division of Adult Education for the State of New Hampshire.

Your correspondent recently received a most interesting letter from Lt. Leo H. Shaughnessey who is on duty in the Canal Zone. It said in part:-"Just wanted to report the Canal Zone B. C. Club joined with others all over the world in the observance of the Universal Boston College Communion Sunday on March 31. Insofar as I know, I'm the only B. C. man on the Zone, so the problem of getting the organization together was a simple one. I think it's a swell idea as it affords all of us a chance at real spiritual accord with those whom we knew at the Heights.

I've been here in the Canal Zone for more than three years and I like it so much I've requested to stay another year. I'm extremely happy with my little family and news of the recent severe winter in the States just made me chuckle. My wife is a former Staten Island girl and we have two youngsters, a boy $3\frac{1}{2}$ and a girl $1\frac{1}{2}$. The tropics agrees with all of us, which is one of the chief reasons why we like it so well here.

The ALUMNI NEWS comes in regularly and I peruse it closely, especially the '31 column. It hardly seems possible that it's ten years this June since I left the Heights to play soldier. I managed to squeeze through at West Point and then was assigned to the Infantry at Fort Wadsworth (Staten Island). From there, here, and I have another 14 months to go before I return to the States where I expect to be sent to the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Georgia. After that, no one knows where.

Please pass on my greetings to the Class and assure them of my interest in their welfare. And while there's no point in any publicity on the matter, I just wanted to let you know that I was with you all on March 31st —A.M.D.G. and for a greater and more glorious B. C."

Rev. Joseph P. Curran, S.J., will be ordained in Weston next month.

Malcolm F. Steele is an attorney at 114 State Street.

JAMES M. CONNOLLY 180 Savin Hill Avenue, Dorchester

the class held a reunion at the Hotel Kenmore. A goodly number were present and such a good time was enjoyed that we have planned a dance at the Fox and Hounds Club during May and a smoker for June. The class will be notified by mail about these. If you have changed your address send the information to Jim Connolly at the address above.

The present class committee—John "Alumni Glee Club" Hanrahan, Ray Callen, John Curley, Charles O'Brien and Jim Connolly—was re-elected with instructions to appoint a subcommittee of class representatives in the various sections of the State and the suburbs of Boston and in the different businesses and professions.

Jim Foley is teaching at the Dearborn School in Roxbury.

Terry McGovern continues to prepare for dental surgery at Tufts Dental and will be practising in June.

John Quinn represents the World's Book Co.'s textbook division in Eastern Massachusetts.

At the smoker we were pleased to meet Father John Daunis who left the class after sophomore to enter St. John's Seminary and is now stationed in Haverhill. We gladly invite any other members of the class who left left during the four years at the College to join in our activities.

Charlie Donahue teaches at the Abraham Lincoln School.

Official tabulator of the Vital Statistics of the class is Jim Crowley. All sons and daughters of members are to be registered with him; also all Bald Eagles. In his spare time Jim is a representative for the Federal Housing Authority.

Rev. William Riley is stationed in Newburyport.

As a member of the bar Henry Barnes is practising low with David Fulton. Ed Burns is a reporter on the Boston American.

An engagement of class interest is that of Bill Shanahan to Miss Sue Dargin of Dorchester. Dick Monahan is in the architecture and engineering field in Lowell.

In Lowell also you will find Frank Earley in the outdoor advertising business.

Ed Kennedy is accountant for Malone Brothers in Chelsea.

Bucky Warren represents Knowles Religious Goods in Rhode Island and Connecticut.

Bill Baker is with the N. E. Tel. & Tel. Co.

Professional representative is Ed Jak-mauh for the Winthrop Chemical Co. Ed Roach is treasurer of Green Acres Dairy Products, Inc.

Ken Kelley officiates as Business Representative of Meat & Food Store Employees, an A. F. of L. affiliate, and is making special studies at the Harvard Law School.

Dr. Gene McDonald is in Radiology at Boston City Hospital and is leaving soon for special work in Baltimore.

Joe Ford is with the Maryland Casualty Co.

Jim Connolly attended the sales meeting of Twentieth Century Fox Film Corp. in Chicago during April.

T. HARNEY DONOHUE
1 Oakland Avenue, Brighton

Dave Ascher is an interne at the Combridge City Hospital.

Gerry Barry is spreading the Boston College influence in the western part of the state. Gerry is teaching at Deerfield High School.

Chick Artesani has announced his candidacy for the House of Representatives in Ward 22, Brighton. If only the youngsters could vote, Chick would not need to campaign, since he is known to all of them. In addition, he is sponsoring an entry in the Boston Park League, to be known as the Artesani Club.

Joe Burke became a career man in the Society of Jesus, after graduating in 1934, and is now completing his studies way out on the West Coast, in the State of Washington.

When last heard from that silent wit from Hyde Park, Greg Byrne, was resident physician at the Milford Hospital in Milford, Delaware.

Nazzareno Cedrone is teaching Mathematics back at the Heights.

Gerry Cummings and George Miller are together as internes at the Boston City Hospital, a much coveted position, incidentally.

The spontaneous response to and the overwhelming success of the Dallas trip lead us to hope that our alumni and other friends may be able to join us again and to make this trip even more enjoyable. Present interest and enthusiasm indicate that this will be so.

The general public is cordially invited.

"LET'S ALL FLY SOUTH WITH THE EAGLES"

JOHN S. KEOHANE, '14, General Chairman. Tom Fadden has blossomed out into quite a Thespian. He is one of the old standbys in the dramatic presentations of the St. Columbkille players. Ed Halligan has recently been appointed a permanent teacher at the Thomas Edison Junior High School in Brighton. Ed occupies the chair of science.

Joe Hogan (the only fellow in the class who dared to wear a derby, while at the Heights) is now pacticing law in Everett. He is associated with the City Solicitor of Everett.

Roy Jensen is a pilot with the Pan-American Airways, flying out of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

At last reports Ed (Three Points) Kelly was doing social work in East Boston.

Bill Parks is associated with his brother in the wholesale plumbing supply business.

Leo Scully is an agent for the Rhode Island Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children in Woonsocket, R. I

Tom Sullivan, formerly of Dorchester, and now of Jamaica Plain, is teaching in the Boston schools.

Henry Titus is teaching History at Boston College.

Dan Twomey is another member of the teacher brigade. Dan is teaching in one of the Somerville Junior High schools. Johnny Hickey is also a teacher in Somerville.

Several of the fellows are being ordained from the Seminary this year. Included in this number are Marty Dolphin, Walter Flaherty, John Fogarty, Jack Saunders, Dan Sullivan, and Jack Tierney.

Some others who are at the Seminary are John Cogavin, Frank Dopherty, Charlie Downey, George Murphy, and John Wallace.

Frank Sullivan of Revere is another addition to the medical men in the class. He and Ed Whelan did a bang-up job as ushers at Charlie Manganelli's wedding last Fall. Dan O'Keefe was superb as best man.

Jerry O'Connor is another who is eligible for the married men's team at the next outing. Jerry graduated from Harvard Business School and is connected with the John Hancock Life Insurance Co.

Frank Farrenkopf is now a veteran in the office of the Commissioner of Education.

The two Joyces from Cambridge are attacking the problem of making a living in different ways: Maurice is a lawyer associated with James H. Flanagan, a member of the Boston Finance Commission; Bill is a teacher in the Cambridge public schools.

George Lang and Stan Jundzil have recently been appointed to the Boston Police Department.

Mark Lewis is living in Detroit, Michigan, and is a professor at Detroit University.

Bob McQuilland has been working in Los Angeles, California, for the last four or five years.

We wind up with a sad note. Frank Bertolani, he of the ready smile and unruly hair, passed away after a brief illness. There was not a more faithful member of the class. I cannot remember a function that Frank missed. No sales talk was necessary to insure his presence; a mere announcement sufficed. The class extends its deepest sympathy to Frank's parents and sister.

STANLEY J. DRISCOLL 115 Eliot Street, Brookline

Frederick P. Carmody is currently with the Remington Rand Company doing sales promotion work. Fred is also a member of the Alumni Glee Club, and all you people who missed their recent concert at Jordan Hall missed out on an excellent performance. Fred was outstanding in his solo work.

Paul J. Coughlin finds time between Alumni Glee Club concerts to take top honors at Tufts Medical.

Frank P. Crowley, Jr., is also a member of the Alumni Glee Club.

George D. Cunning is studying law at B. C. Law School.

James F. Dineen as dapper as ever, is located with the Boston office of the N. Y. A. as a local supervisor, while going to B. C. Law School nights.

John F. Donelan at last reports seldom leaves the hallowed halls of Harvard Law School where he is adding more laurels to his already overladen brow. Thomas F. Dorsey is now a full fledged senior salesman for the Coca-Cola Company and may be seen any day driving his wares through Central Sauare.

James F. Droney recently made News Editor of the new radio station in Salem, WESX, which along with his editorial duties on the "Marblehead Messenger," keeps him stranded on the North Shore.

William M. Foley is with the Geological Department of the U. S. Government on a national survey.

Sidney B. Fox engaged in the paper business in his home town of Haverhill, the Fox Paper Co.

Joseph L. Gormley is with the Department of Justice, Washington, D. C. Walter A. Hamilton, Jr., is in the printing business in his home town. Any fellows in that section should give him a call on their printing work.

Rene J. Masse after spending a season in the furniture business in Manchester, N. H., is currently located with Hovey's Department Store in Boston. He is also one of the backers of the newly organized Graduate Chemists Club.

John J. Mitchell continuing his collegiate record of being the most active member of '37, is in Washington, D. C., Room 100 of the Federal Housing Administration, also at Georgetown Law School nights, and on the side does some work for a mill in New Jersey. Of course he is fortunate in having a very lovely wife to help him-

Kenneth J. Murray at last reports was somewhere in the wilds of Pennsylvania attending medical school.

Charles J. Quigley and Walter Scott are with the B. B. Chemical Company employed in the outside developments department.

Thomas A. Saint has been with the United Shoe Machinery Company since graduation from Harvard Business School last June and at last reports was out in Minnesota samewhere. Miss my bet if Tom doesn't end up as an executive of the Company.

Myer Tobey is due back from Notre Dame this summer where he has been filling out a scholarship in their Social Service School. Like to hear from you Mike.

Aldo G. Verde — we understand Al is putting on weight at Tufts Medical. This being the season when a young man's fancy, etc. . . . we understand several of our brethren finally gave in under the strain of Leap Year, and answered "Yes" among them being: Steve Witham, Thomas A. Grimes, William M. Burns, Thomas Dorsey and Jim McInerney.

Also this being the season when several of the brethren finish up classes at various graduate schools, we plan to hold a reunion party in honor of the event. However, we would like to hear a few suggestions as to the form in which we hold this reunion.

that Ennui as a commodity is becoming as rare as a smile on a "red cap's" face since the new checking system took over. You can't go around being bored these days.

The newspapers are printing scare headlines in so many rapid fire editions that dyspepsia has practically attained the social status of an appendectomy.

Any stranger who takes a seat in the smoker of the 5.46 is immediately tagged as a member of the 5th Column.

The time is not far distant before the man who comes to read the meter will have to flash a visa before he can cross the threshold.

Things might even come to such a colorful contretemps that fewer hats will be missing from cafeteria hooks. For who can tell in this day and age just what might be a Booby trap.

Hazards are now all about us. The Secretary has learned that only the other nite a member of the department fell asleep while reading in bed and suffered a broken nose when a copy of LIFE fell on him.

Operative O. U. 2 reports that the first U. S. Bombshelter is somewhere in this vicinity. It is owned by a gentleman whose wife does not approve of strong pipes. Tho' this attitude strangely does not conflict with her love for the opera. His bombshelter was formerly where he was wont to retire for an after dinner pipe and is located eight paces North by West of the Oil Burner in the basement, behind an old highboy. He feels secure because, as he says, if there are any air raids they won't find any air down there.

At this point the Secretary filed his report and made for the lunch room to brush up on his counter espionage.

Kevin Sullivan's many friends will be happy to hear that Kev is once again in Boston. Kev is at the Firestone Station on Brookline Ave. Ed Toomey is covering Cambridge for the Boston American—so in case of a hot story, don't forget to call the Press Room at Police Headquarters. (I did and he was quite indignant about it.)

Well, we had our class reunion as most of you know! One hundred and thirty men attended—Father Daniel O'Connor, S.J., was the speaker of the evening. His discussion was quite enlightening—more of the material and a practical application of our Philosophy. The following were elected class officers: John Gavin, President; Tom True, Secretary; Leo Downes, Treasurer.

John Finnerty is now with his father's concern—and from all reports, he will soon be one of New England's meat salesmen.

"Jim" Cahill is connected with a paper concern, for whom he acts as a contact salesman on large bulk paper orders. By the way, Jim's baby is the official class baby. I checked this carefully. Any claim to the contrary, however, will receive careful consideration.

John King is working for William Filene's Sons Company as a salesman. He will enter the Executive Training Corps in the fall.

Bill "Southern Boston" Mahoney is working for the Boston Elevated. I think his figure has definitely improved in a uniform. Bill is still going to Law School in case, as he puts it, someone starts trouble on the car, "I'll know my legal rights." Never heard Bill lose an argument in his life.

Dick Canavan is teaching history at St. Anselm's College in Manchester, N. H.

Eugene Soles and Bob Callahan are employed in the Claims Department of the American Mutual Insurance Co. Eugene was recently transferred to the New York office.

Joseph E. King is a Second Lieutenant in the Quartermaster Corps at Fort Benning, Georgia.

Hugo Blandori is assistant coach and teacher at Coyle High School in Taunton.

Neil King and John Murphy are teaching in the Watertown School System.

Tom Gormley, formerly of Father Quinn's Sophomore Class—how could any of us forget that section?—was recently married to Jean Toyl of Forest Hills. Tom now runs his own insurance brokerage firm.

Let us know what you are doing!

Paul Flynn is studying radio announcing at the Emerson School of Oratory.

Ed Foley is finishing up for his master's degree at the Heights.

John Keefe from Malden is now in the Government's fingerprint department in Washington, where '39 is also represented by Jerry Coughlin at law school. John O'Donnell and Charles Barrett are with the Government printing office.

Ed Rooney was recently elected vicepresident of the Boston Chapter of Blackfriars, a national Catholic theatre movement.

Will Holland is an assistant chemist for LePage's Glue.

Paul Bradley is working for Ryerson Steel in Cambridge.

The first reunion of the class was held at the Blacksmith Shop in Whitman a short time ago and about 100 fellows were present to enjoy a fine meal and swap questions on who is working and how.

Paul Needham is still with Swift & Company.

Joseph F. McEvoy, Jr., has been chosen president of the graduating class of Boston University School of Law.

ALUMNI FIELD DAY

The Alumni Association will conduct a Field Day at the College in the fall.

Definite plans can not be announced at this time but those of the alumni who remember the field days or garden parties which were conducted in the early twenties will recall them with considerable pleasure. The forthcoming event will fol-low very much along the lines of the parties held in those days.

The committee in charge of arrangements consists of the presidents of the several Boston Callege clubs and it is confidently expected that day will prove to be a most enjoyable reunion for the alumni, their wives and friends.
